One hundred and twenty three large employers play an important role in Boston's economy. These business establishments and institutions with more than 500 employees account for forty percent of the total employment in the city, while making up less than one percent of the total number of enterprises. The large employers represent a broad diversity of activities that form the base of Boston's economy. The main location for these businesses, as well as smaller companies, has been the downtown area, followed by Fenway/Kenmore and Back Bay/Beacon Hill, which combine to be home to seventy-nine percent of the large employers.

Private employment in Suffolk County was 498,241 in 1987, according to the US Department of Commerce, County Business Patterns. Boston companies accounted for 96 percent of Suffolk County employment. (The other four percent of the jobs were located in Winthrop, Chelsea and Revere.)

In our report businesses are listed in the appendix with: firm name, zip code, address, and SIC (Standard Industrial Classification code). The firms are arranged in the following categories: 500-999 employees; 1,000-1,999; 2,000-3,999; 4,000-6,999; and 7,000 and above. Actual employment totals for each employer are not published in this report since some figures were obtained in confidence.

In the 1983 survey, the businesses that employed between 500 and 999 people made up 13 percent of total employment. In 1987 the same group increased to 16 percent. For the category 1,000 to 1,999 the share of employment decreased from 17 percent to 15 percent. The 2,000 to 3,999 group remained at 26 percent. Employment in the 4,000 to 6,999 group fell, from 29 to 22 percent.

The largest group, over 7,000, increased its employment share from 15 to 21 percent. See Figure 4.

Despite the small percentage of businesses that are in the class of large employers, companies with 500 or more employees hired almost 4 workers out of every 10 employed in Suffolk County. See Figures 1-3. Total employment for the large employers was between 190,000 and 200,000 in 1987, compared to between 168,000 and 170,000 in 1983. Large employers are shown in the five size categories, with 48 percent of the large employers having between 2,000 and 7,000 employees. See Figure 4. Considering the small proportion of the number of companies (123 out of a total of 19,205) compared to the size of the work force, the large employers have tremendous importance in the City by providing a relatively stable, diverse base of employment.

Boston's largest employers are concentrated in finance and services with seven out of every ten of their workers employed in hospitals, finance, insurance, educational services and professional services. See Figures 5 and 8. The figure for manufacturing is small. The decline in number of large Boston employers in manufacturing in the 1970's and '80's followed the trend for the region and the country.

The three main locations for the large employers have been the downtown area, Fenway/Kenmore and Back Bay/Beacon Hill. The downtown area increased its percentage of employees from 34 percent to 44.5 percent from 1983 to 1989. See Figure 6. Fenway/Kenmore remained about 16 percent, largely due to the location of many of the major hospitals in the city. Back Bay/Beacon Hill had 18.9 percent of the employees in the 1989 survey, up from 11 percent in 1983.

Boston's large employers benefit greatly by being in New England's largest city. The wide diversity of businesses, population, and cultural attractions makes Boston an ideal location, providing buyers, sellers, and tourists contact with a variety of opportunities. Transportation into the city takes several forms. Routes 90, 93, and 95 all flow into Boston, allowing access to the downtown area. All four subway lines meet at some point in the city, and expanded commuter rail services provides excellent public transportation to the city. Logan International Airport in less than two miles from the downtown area. Being centrally located is important to large employers for a large workforce and being available to clients, and services needed for large firms. Personal contact remains a vital part of doing business, despite the improvements in communications technologies.
